Acceptance of late applications under the Military Service Pensions Act, 1924.

The Referee having examined the Petition of Mr.

Charles Doyle

in connection with the re-investigation of his application under the Military Service Pensions Act, 1934 has reported that in accordance with the provisions of Section II (1) (i) of the Military Service Pensions (Amendment) Act, 1949 he is not of opinion that there is a prima facie case that the applicant is a person to whom the Act of 1934 applies and must, therefore, refuse to re-investigate the application.

The Referee states, however, that his decision is governed by the fact that the applicant appears to be a person to whom the Act of 1924 applies. The applicant has now submitted an application under this Act together with an explanation as to why he did not apply within the statutory time limit.

The following is a summary of his explanation; -

Appt. states that the reason he did not apply under the 1924 Act was that he was in America at the time the Act came into force.

Submitted for your decision as to whether the application may be accepted.

Why I did not claim for a pension under the 1924 Act

is that I was not at home I was in America when that Act was out I know I was entitled under that Act.

I joined the Volunteers 1914 and went through the lot until the truce in 1921.

The Minister for Defence:

With reference to the petition submitted by the above-named under Section 11(1) of the Military Service Pensions Act, 1949, I desire to state that, having examined the petition in accordance with the provisions of Section 11(1)(i), I am not of the opinion that there is a prima facie case that the applicant is a person to whom the Act of 1934 applies and I must, therefore, refuse to re-investigate the application.

It should be noted, however, that my decision in this case is governed by the fact that the applicant appears to be a person to whom the Act of 1924 applies and he is, accordingly, barred under the 1934 Act by reason of the provisions in Section 3(1)(c) of that Act.

It is assumed that the acceptance of a late application under the Military Service Pensions Act, 1924, will receive favourable consideration.
